Two More Blows Against Italy—

Brindisi Blasted: Army Runs

GREEKS CAPTURE MORE POSITIONS

Special To "The People"

GREEK TROOPS CONTINUING YESTERDAY THEIR STRONG OFFENSIVE AGAINST ITALIAN POSITIONS ALONG THE CHERANA RIVER STORMED THE VALLEY AND, ACCORDING TO REPORTS REACHING A.P., CAPTURED

DUCE'S OTHER TROUBLE

Army-Fascist Feud Renewed

SPECIAL TO "THE PEOPLE"

MUSSOLINI'S LOT IS NOT A HAPPY ONE. REVERSES ON LAND, AT SEA, AND IN THE AIR ARE ONLY SOME OF THE FACTORS WHICH ARE LOWERING HIS PRESTIGE AND UNDERMINING HIS STRENGTH AS ITALY'S DICTATOR.

He has other troubles, too, notably a revival of the old quarrel between the Fascist Party and the Regular Army. News from a private, trustworthy source has reached the Independent French Agency in London that the feud has flared up again after the reverses suffered by the Italians in the Greek campaign.

The Agency statement, quoted by Reuter, declared yesterday that matters in Italy were more serious today than at the beginning of the Abyssinian war.

"It may be recalled," says the agency, "how that campaign began, disastrously, and how Marshal Badoglio, when appointed to take over the command from de Bono, said: 'I no longer want Fascist militiamen I want to carry on the war solely with the Regular Army and Askaris (native levies).'"

Bishop Attacks Cement "Kings"

D. R. BARNES, BISHOP OF BIRMINGHAM, TOLD A BIRMINGHAM AUDIENCE YESTERDAY THAT IN GERMANY THE CHIEF MEN OF THE CEMENT GROUP WOULD BE TAKEN BY THE GESTAPO TO A CONCENTRATION CAMP.

A few days later it would be announced they had been shot trying to escape. A month later adequate supplies of cement would be forthcoming.

He was making a plea for steel and concrete Haldane shelters at an exhibition organised by Birmingham A.R.P. Co-ordinating Committee.

Although dreadful, he said, the German system was "really efficient."

Third British Woman Arrested

WHILE BRITISH AUTHORITIES WERE CONSIDERING THE CASES OF TWO ENGLISH-WOMEN LIVING IN PARIS WHO HAD BEEN SENTENCED TO DEATH BY THE NAZIS, NEWS REACHED LONDON YESTERDAY THAT THE NAZIS HAD ARRESTED A THIRD ENGLISHWOMAN, MISS MAY JAMES.

She was employed by the Y.W.C.A. and had been arrested on a charge of espionage and possessing a wireless transmitting apparatus.

She has been detained in the Cherche Midi military prison in Paris for the last fortnight.

An official of the Y.W.C.A. said yesterday that when the Gestapo entered Miss James's apartment they found no wireless transmitting apparatus.

Miss James had been in charge of the British American Welfare Hostel of the Y.W.C.A. near the Madeleine for the last ten years. Many British and American Assault units of the advancing forces met with desperate resistance from Italian forces holding positions on the river.

Their defensive action was in vain. Slowly they retired before the victorious Greeks, suffering heavy losses as they did so. In one sector, so fierce was the fighting, bodies of Italian soldiers were heaped together in ravines.

Latest reports received from Reuter's special correspondent on the Yugoslav-Albanian frontier indicated that the Italians, in face of this new Greek thrust, were hastily withdrawing their long-range heavy guns from important positions on mountain heights north-west of Podgradetz.

Observers on the frontier believed that the guns were being moved back in the direction of El Basan, where the Italians were expected to take up new positions.

Their retirement yesterday covered the whole of the Northern front, and in an attempt to check the Greek attack the Italians launched strong counter-attacks further south between Leskovik and Kolonia, according to reports reaching Monastir.

BRITISH BOMBERS HELP

These counter-attacks were stated last night to have been repulsed.

British bombers continue to help the Greeks to press home their offensive. R.A.F. headquarters in Cairo yesterday issued an official communique disclosing that on the night of November 28-29 our bombers carried out a series of attacks on Brindisi.

"More than 26,000 lb. of high explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped on military objectives," said the communique, which added that one stick of bombs burst in line from the quays to fuel tanks south-east of the town, causing one fierce fire, several smaller fires, and a number of explosions.

Other bombs straddled the main railway station of the town, two more fires being started at the southern end of the quays.

In spite of considerable anti-aircraft fire, the attack was pressed home without loss or damage to any of our aircraft.

The Greek air force also continues to play its part in the war. Reports received in Athens from the Front last night stated that Greek planes brought down eight Italian aircraft yesterday—four fighter planes and four pursuit machines.

NEW "WRENS" BADGE

The Queen has approved the design for a W.R.N.S. badge. The badge has no part in the uniform of the Service, but may be used for stationery and on informal occasions. It consists of a naval crown and anchor on the top of a scroll, bearing the letters "W.R.N.S."

The Following Has Arrived "Down Under"

A young evacuee from Sheffield just arrived in Australia is met by his girl cousin.

Lorient Again

INVASION PORT BOMBED

BLÉNHEIMS of the Coastal Command, the Air Ministry News Service stated last night, again attacked the enemy-occupied naval base of Lorient yesterday morning.

The Blénheims struck just before daybreak. They illuminated the estuary with flares and dropped high explosives and large numbers of incendiary bombs.

Five large fires were raging as they left.

WOPPING FOR THE WOPS

HEAVY CASUALTIES WERE INFLECTED WHEN A BODY OF ITALIANS WAS AMBUSHED IN THE VICINITY OF KASSALA, ON THE BORDERS OF ERITREA AND THE ANGLO-EGYPTIAN SUDAN. IT WAS DISCLOSED IN THE COMMUNIQUE ISSUED FROM G.H.Q. CAIRO YESTERDAY.

IT STATED: "Sudan.—In the Kassala sector one of our mechanised patrols successfully ambushed a body of enemy, inflicting heavy casualties both on the original party and upon reinforcements which were hurried to the thick of the action. "An enemy reconnaissance force in the Metemma area (on the Sudan-Abyssinia border) was met with a heavy concentration of fire from our artillery. Pétain Laments Their "Sad Fate"

Special To "The People"

ONE OF THE MOST PATHETIC BROADCASTS IN HISTORY WAS MADE BY MARSHAL PÉTAIN TO THE FRENCH NATION YESTERDAY, WHEN HE LAMENTED THE PLIGHT OF LORRAINERS THRUST BY THE GERMANS FROM THEIR HOMES.

He said: "Frenchmen, 70,000 inhabitants of Lorraine have arrived in unoccupied France, having left all behind them—their homes, their goods, their villages, their churches, the burial-places where lie their ancestors, and, in fact, everything life holds dear.

"They have lost everything: they have come to ask for refuge from their French brothers in the middle of winter, without any resources, their only possessions being their pride in remaining French.

"Nevertheless, they have accepted their sad fate without complaining and without recrimination. They are Frenchmen of the highest order, with fighting spirit and valiant hearts.

"A great proportion among them are peasants, and living as they did on the frontier, they have for centuries suffered more than others from the rigours of war. I feel, as you also must feel, all their sufferings.

"The Government is doing its duty in alleviating their distress and giving them the means of livelihood and work. But Lorraine deserves more than that. Their relief must come from the heart—something which one feels for brothers and loved relatives.

"Already several proposals concerning property, houses and farming have been put at the disposal of the refugees. In addition, each Department must do everything it can to lighten their burden and supply their wants."

"Each one of you must help them, comfort them and give them work wherever they can be employed. "And all this must be done with an ardent enthusiasm, so that they will feel around them nothing but sympathy and affection. "From this effort of solidarity towards our unfortunate compatriots we shall emerge a better and a more united nation."—Reuter.

GERMANY'S CASE

A statement on the deportation of the French people referred to by Marshal Pétain was made by Buerckel, Gauleiter for the Saar, in Saarbrücken, yesterday. These steps, the Gauleiter declared, had been necessary in order to clarify once and for all the position on Germany's future Western Frontier, so that war would never again have to be waged on its account.

Only Germans, he said, should live where German frontiers extended.

Big Nazi Raid Fails

THREE ENEMY PLANES DOWN

THREE ENEMY AIRCRAFT WERE SHOT DOWN IN RAIDS OVER THIS COUNTRY YESTERDAY. TWO OF OUR FIGHTERS WERE LOST, BUT THE PILOTS ARE SAFE. This news was given officially last night.

A Dornier is also believed to have been shot down off the S.E. Coast yesterday.

Taking advantage of poor visibility the Nazis yesterday had sent over the Kent Coast the largest force of fighter-bombers they have used for some time in daylight raids. Our fighters were awaiting them, and the enemy were almost completely dispersed.

Only a few managed to approach London after a hide-and-seek in the clouds.

One or two of the enemy released bombs on the capital.

Soon after the Alert was sounded a heavy bomb whistled down in a residential area. People in near-by shopping street and stores rushed for cover.

The bomb hit a building which was unoccupied except for a caretaker and his wife. Both were unhurt.

DRIVER'S ESCAPE

A taxi was half buried by debris, but the driver crawled out with nothing more serious than a cut on the head.

Women shoppers showed remarkable composure. As soon as the alarm was over they went on with their shopping.

Raiders were reported over a South Wales town last night.

In the previous night's raid on London the Germans claimed that several hundred planes dropped 400 tons of H.E. bombs and 36,000 incendiaries.

Smaller attacks, the Germans declared, were made on Liverpool, Birmingham and Plymouth.

Italian bombers "successfully raided Ipswich."

The casualties in London during this raiding, the Air Ministry stated last night, "were somewhat heavier than was at first thought."

R.A.F. Save Crippled Destroyer

Nazis Lose Three Bombers

Special to "The People"

RELAYS of German bombers trying to "finish off" H.M.S. Javelin, the destroyer partially disabled in Friday's Channel battle with German naval forces, failed in their object after a thrilling aerial combat.

Javelin, aboard which was Captain the Lord Louis Mountbatten, cousin of the King, was hit and damaged by a torpedo early in the engagement.

As the destroyer was limping towards port Nazi bombers directed their best to sink her.

For several hours patrols of R.A.F. fighters beat off the bombers' attacks.

When Javelin had safely made port the R.A.F. reckoned up their score. It was three German bombers shot down and one damaged. R.A.F. losses were nil.

The Admiralty communique, giving details of the naval engagement, stated last night: "It is now possible to give some further details of the action which took place in the English Channel early yesterday (Friday) morning between our light forces and those of the enemy. Contact was made at 5.40 and fire was immediately opened by both sides."

"The German force, which consisted of at least three destroyers, scattered and withdrew at high speed towards the French coast firing torpedoes as they went."

SAFE IN PORT

"One of our destroyers, H.M.S. Javelin (Commander A. F. Pugsley, R.N.), on board which was the officer in command of the flotilla (Captain, the Lord Louis Mountbatten, R.N.), was hit and damaged by a torpedo early in the engagement. H.M.S. Javelin has now been brought safely into port."

"Another of our destroyers chased one enemy destroyer which made off to the westward under cover of smoke, but lost touch after half an hour owing to the darkness and the enemy's use of smoke screens."

The remaining enemy destroyers were chased to the southward by other British units. These German destroyers also escaped in the darkness, and subsequent attempts to regain touch proved fruitless.

"It has not been possible to establish with certainty the extent of the damage inflicted by our gunfire, but the enemy was seen to be repeatedly hit."

"Next-of-kin of casualties in H.M.S. Javelin are being informed as soon as possible. Our forces sustained no other damage or casualties."

It is learned authoritatively that Lord Louis Mountbatten was uninjured.

TRIED TO SAVE HIS PLAZING PLANE

DURING an air battle over a Kent village yesterday afternoon, people saw the pilot of a Hurricane make a desperate attempt to save his machine before he abandoned it.

The Hurricane was on fire, and the airman twisted and turned and twice rolled the plane right over in an attempt to put out the flames. The fire continued to spread, however, until the machine was only about 1,000 ft. over the village.

The airman jumped and made a safe landing by parachute. He was unhurt, and his blazing plane crashed into a field not far from a house.

MINISTRY OF FOOD

THIS WEEK'S

FOOD FACTS

THE child between two and five years old cannot eat anything and everything. His meals should be carefully thought out. Here are some suggestions.

Safeguard Your Milk

IN present conditions—even if you live in the country—all milk should be sterilised. It is the duty of all grown-up people to do with less milk this winter, so that children and nursing mothers can be sure of getting as much as they need.

Remember that a child needs plenty of milk every day. There is no other food so good for him—for his bones, teeth, brain and vitality. He may not like it by itself—but give it to him in a pudding or as a milk and vegetable soup, and he will thoroughly enjoy it.

If you haven't already done so, ask your local Food Office about free or cheap milk for young children under the National Milk Scheme.

How to Make Oatcakes

Oatmeal, one of the finest foods for giving warmth and energy, is a "must" for growing children. They will probably like it as oatcakes, made this way. Mix together 8ozs. fine oatmeal, 1½ ozs. self-raising flour and ½ teaspoonful salt. Add 1 tablespoonful dripping, melted, and enough boiling water to bind. Roll out the mixture as thinly as possible in a little fine oatmeal. Cut it into triangles and bake in a greased tin in a fairly hot oven.

Three Protectives

Everyone needs "protective" foods—the foods that build up resistance to illness and fatigue; growing children need them most of all. Here are three that are plentiful this winter.

BAKED POTATOES. Encourage your children to eat baked potatoes, jacket and all. The jacket has a delicious sweet flavour and provides valuable roughage. The potato is not only a "protector" but also an energy-giver.

CARROTS. One of the most valuable of the root vegetables, are an important protective food. They are rich in Vitamin A which helps to guard us against winter ills, and are also good for teeth, bones and blood. Most children love carrot when it has been washed, lightly scraped and grated raw into a salad or a sandwich.

SALADS. If a child is fond of salads he is well on the way to good health. Salads and vegetables are what he needs almost more than anything else, so train him to like them as early as you can.

You will find that many children, when they can't cope with a plateful of green salad, will enjoy it when it's well chopped up between slices of wholemeal bread.

Apple-Ade

Never waste the peel and cores of your apples. Boil them in a little water, and you'll have a delicious and very health-giving drink.

If you have not already applied for your new Ration Book, do so AT ONCE or you may have difficulty in getting rations in the New Year. DON'T FORGET TO PUT THE LETTERS AND NUMBERS OF YOUR NATIONAL REGISTRATION NUMBER AT THE BOTTOM LEFT-HAND CORNER OF THE APPLICATION CARD.

Unless 2 pints of bile flow from your liver into your bowels every day, your movements get hard and constipated and your food decays unnaturally in your 28 feet of bowels. This decay sends poison all over your body every six minutes. It makes you gloomy, grouchy and no good for anything.

Your friends smell this decay coming out of your mouth and call it bad breath. Laxatives and mouth washes help a little, but you must get at the cause. Take Carters Little Liver Pills. TWO MEETINGS THAT WERE GOING ON SIMULTANEOUSLY IN LONDON LAST WEEK SYMBOLISED THE CONTRAST IN THE TWO MOODS IN WHICH PEOPLE VIEW THE PROGRESS OF THE WAR.

In the Commons, M.P.s were discussing with a grave frankness the seriousness of our shipping position, and, what I have already stressed in these columns—the urgent need for organising with a greater vigour our resources in men, money and materials.

I reminded you how, to the accompaniment of the nation's cheers, an Act was passed six months ago, to nationalise us all—our homes, our banks, our businesses, our money—and that no use had been made of it. Life is, of course, conscripted, but wealth, oh no! polite requests, complained Emanuel Shinwell in a grave warning about the chaos—"requests to owners of machine tools, appeals for high-powered cars, requests about railway wagons. If compulsion of men, why not compulsion of other things of the State?"

"Until the whole resources of the country are mobilised for the prosecution of the war," declared Leslie Hore-Belisha, "we cannot hope to defeat Germany."

Winston In A "Victory" Mood

IN the Dorchester Hotel, while this debate went on, Winston Churchill was lunching with the serving members of the House of Commons. He, the real head of all the Services, was the only one not in uniform.

Although the ten-minute speech he made was private, I am told it was cheerful and optimistic. That I can believe, for when I met the Premier a few minutes after, he was bubbling over with a mood that was the reverse of gloom. He smiled with his eyes. His cordial greeting reflected his cheeriness.

He looked, compared to the newly chosen Premier of six months ago—I have nothing to offer you but blood and toil and tears and sweat—a new man, made youthful again by events. Serious may be our position today. Serious, at times, it will seem for months.

But, in spite of bombardment of our factories and the need for more guns, more shells, more planes, more ships, there seem, already, rays of hope.

A Few Months Ago—And Now

PETAIN'S refusal of German proposals made through the underhand agency of Laval certainly seems to show that Nazism is afraid, for fear of creating a rebellion among the French populace, of imposing terms obviously well within its power.

Then there are Bulgaria's refusal to join the Axis, Turkey's threats to oppose any action in the Balkans that weakened her, Yugoslavia's stiffening against Nazi pressure, and Spain's obvious reluctance to risk more than covert co-operation with Germany.

All these changes of front are due to the fact that Greek dash and daring, supplemented by the help of our pilots and the backing of our Fleet, have so transformed the Mediterranean situation that what looked almost like despair when France collapsed has now become what is almost assurance of Victory.

THE War Cabinet has had, in recent months, many anxious hours. Things were at times even worse than the Premier, in his grimmest moods, betrayed.

On paper, we were beaten. According to all the war textbooks, the British lion was not only at bay. He was helpless.

How we survived those anxious weeks will be recorded in the history books as the rejuvenation of an ancient people. It will be the subject of a hundred plays, innumerable sonnets, and be held up through all Time as a pattern and an example to all Posterity.

Had Hitler attacked us after Dunkirk, the war would have been over. For France would have deserted us, anyway. Had Mussolini, coming in, he thought, to snatch some of the spoils without a fight, marched on Egypt, three months ago, he might have had an easy task. Then, the first stage of the Battle of the Empire could have proved, for us, a bitter defeat.

YESTERDAY!

deserts and try to cut our lifeline to the East, the Suez Canal? Has Graziani already been dealt such blows from the air by our pilots, and from the sea by our warships, that he fears to move? How much food and replenishment he can get from the countries of North Africa, we do not know. What is known is that every gallon of petrol, every cartridge and every shell has to be carried overseas, and in boats that have to dodge our sea forces and take advantage of the night.

Is it true, now that Italian warships no longer outnumber ours, that his supply ships are so harried when they seek to reach him that more and more of them stop in harbour? Even then, now, they are not safe. Nor are the transports in which Mussolini has to send reinforcements to Albania, to stiffen resistance in what has at times become almost a rout.

IN only a fortnight Fascism has suffered many blows to its prestige that, in self-defence, one of its leading spokesmen has gone so far as to criticise, in severe terms, the military high command, generals, dispositions, strategy!

Mussolini indicts the "pacifists" in his country, meaning, of course, the millions of Italians who know they have nothing to gain from the war and who rather like the British and hate the Germans, anyway!

If he turns to Hitler for help he becomes, not his accomplice, but his vassal. How long, alone, can he withstand blows that are not only directed at his army, warships and central bases, but every time one hits, makes him look no longer a demi-god but merely an over-fat buffoon.

For years, you know, because of his squat shortness, camera men have been ordered to photograph him from near the ground, to give him an appearance of added height.

"How can I do it now?" they will soon be saying. "I can't tell how low enough. He's getting smaller!"

Anyway, the blows still fall. Urged on by the newspapers and by Parliament, backed, indeed, by millions who felt that, for months, some secret Somebody had been asking that Italy should be spared, our War Cabinet ordered action so successful that it has made Mussolini the laughing-stock of the world.

His mechanised armies have been put to flight by the comparatively ill-armed Greeks. His vaunted aeroplanes, trained in their murderous tactics on helpless Spaniards, are brought down continually. His warships, chased back into port whenever they venture forth, usually await destruction in harbours which they obviously prefer to what they boasted was "Our Sea."

And Britain, which recently had only Malta as a base from which to attack Italy, now has, in the Mediterranean, innumerable islands from which it can send its deadly planes.

Egypt Stronger; Blockade Tighter

ALL the time, too, our strength in Egypt grows—and all over the Near East and the Balkans there spreads a greater confidence in our power.

Nor is Italy afraid only of us. Albanians, with Greeks occupying some of their towns, are being threatened with what may become revolt. And in Syria, the French, whose spirit is not all weakened by Vichy war, must be thinking, as they see Mussolini's agents counting their booty, "What the Greeks did to the Italians, surely we can do to them?"

Meanwhile, our blockade tightens its grip. Spain's supplies are now limited to a three-months' need at the most, so even if Franco would, almost none of it can reach Germany. The conquered countries are still being plundered; but that cannot go on indefinitely.

There are signs, too, of "difficulties" with the populations of lands that Hitler considers his vassals. Not in every way are these territories to be regarded as added strength. Infinite labour can be forced to make war supplies for use against us it is true; but the French, the Norwegians, the Belgians, and particularly the Dutch have to be

You Will Agree Musso's Bubble Has Burst

DEAR TIN-POT CÆSAR,

IN THE COURSE OF YOUR CAREER YOU HAVE MADE ME MARVEL, LAUGH AND GRIEVE. I HAVE MARVELLED AT THE FOLLY OF HUMAN NATURE WHICH HAS MADE YOU POSSIBLE.

Think of it. Millions of lovers of sun and spaghetti have applauded your knavish antics to the point of being dragged into a horrible war they didn't want.

Think of the linen-collared, morning-coated diplomats of Britain and France who have fallen for your bluff and bluster.

And, in actuality, you are no more than a cowardly little jackal. You really are little, both in body and mind.

Your mind has appeared big, because you have had to deal with small-minded men dressed in respectable pin-striped trousers and furnished with inept attack-dogs.

This smallness, conceit and vanity of yours have developed a mountain of sorrow for folks who have done you not an atom of harm.

Do you remember, you feeble imitation of a Roman Emperor, how you attacked the Abyssinians? You threw your Fascists against these naked Africans who had to meet bombs and poison-gas with wooden shields.

Slaves had to oppose steel and the spear the tank. Up above were waves of Italian bombers and pursuit planes which had nothing to pursue.

Among the bombers was your own whip, a cowardly son of a cowardly father. In your sojourn in Purgatory, you will both recall how he boasted of these deeds of his.

One group of horsemen," he bragged, "gave me the impression of a rose unfolding as the bomb blew them up. "It was exceptionally good fun."

WHAT A fine exploit—without an anti-aircraft gun within a thousand miles!

How like his courageous sire in his armchair down Piazza Venezia way!

Do you not admit, Il Duce, that equal heroism would be needed in spreading an ice-cream wafer in some Italian confectionery booth?

Then, noble Roman, consider your magnificent attack on still another race of shepherds, who, also, had never a chance.

You, Ciano and Gayda, a fine trio of jackals, for many months howled at France—at a jackal-like distance.

"Nice, Corsica, Sardinia," you yelped. But you dared not attack France on your own. Not on your life.

Instead, you won prestige by turning East and slaughtering helpless, harmless Albanians.

I repeat that I marvelled at those statesmen of Europe who did so little to restrain you, who even made friendly overtures to you.

I would not touch your outstretched hand with a barge-pole.

I marvelled at the consciences of profit-making corporations who supplied petrol for your murderous bombers.

I marvelled at governmental champions of big business who allowed your fiendish enterprise a free hand to rob and murder.

I was agast at religious voices throughout Europe which remained dumb to your infamy.

Benito Mussolini. The name will stink down the centuries as that of a cold-blooded killer of innocents.

And what will history say of condonors of your unprovoked violence?

YOUR story is that of Cain multiplied many times a thousandfold. Your ambition has filled Albania, Abyssinia—and Italy—with tragedy.

And yet, as with all tragedy, some light relief may be found in places.

What ordinary man could remain unmoved at your buffonery—though buffonery you never meant it to be? Your mouth above the balustrade, your fez, braid and salutes have been entertainment for millions.

In particular, have British kind audiences enjoyed your mummery. Whenever you have shown up on the movie news, a ripple of laughter has run around the tip-ups.

until your paunch shivered in jelly fashion from your ardour.

In phoney competition against equally well-fed military trot-alongs, you called, "Am I fit?"

And the dimpled parchment of your middle-aged skin told everyone you were as hardy as a bladder of lard.

But, with all your clowning, how low you could stoop! How vile and lying you were!

You travesty of a tough guy, you told the world of your dogged march on Rome—to face, you said, a Communist menace there.

Actually, you travelled in a Pullman, and, from your own confession, we now know the Communist balcony was a figment of your own imagination.

Your minions doped with castor-oil political opponents falling into their hands, until they lapsed into pitiful weakness.

Mussolini-ism has meant betrayal of old friends of Italy. I believe, my black-shirted, black-hearted Judas, that you reached the pinnacle of treachery when you went to war with Britain and stabbed France in the back.

The British had helped Garibaldi, Italian patriot and soldier, in the war of liberation against the Austrians in 1860.

This meant nothing to you, you self-seeking mountebank. Like the vulture you are, you waited until the corpse of France was ready for the picking.

At that point, you thought Britain also was to take the knock-out blow.

How wrong you were! Greeks and Britons are debanking your bluff, bravado and bounce, at which diplomats formerly trembled.

You are biting your nails over Taranto, Brindisi, Naples and Koritz.

To revive your spirits, you might get on your balcony again and let your jam-roll chin work overtime.

I HOPE your former friendly appeasers will prepare a hot seat for you, when you attempt to appease them.

The whole world of decent folk must feel that way. "We can never be gripped for their miseries," wrote Dryden, "who are thoroughly wicked, and have thereby justly called their calamities on themselves."

You have not my good wishes.

Yours Unappealingly,

The Philosopher

"Never have Norwegians been as united as they are now," the newspaper declares.

The "Philadelphia Public Ledger" says that during the German occupation Norwegians "have taken Hitler's measure."

"Even in their helplessness they have learned to laugh at what they have seen of the Nazis—their sickly attempts to re-assert the invasion of Britain from Norway's coast, their lying and scheming in the Norwegian Parliament, their clumsy propaganda and abortive suppressions, the foul antics of their plunder specialists."

Dealing with Nazi diplomatic activity, the "Charlotte Observer" says: "After all, if one analyses Hitler's recent 'diplomatic' triumphs, instead of accepting Nazi propaganda, it becomes apparent he has made but little headway, if any."

"So far as the world or his own people know, he got nowhere with Soviet Russia, nowhere with Turkey. He has been unable to induce France to sign on the dotted line, nor has he even obtained the signature of Yugoslavia."—Reuter.

DUCE'S FLEET RAN ALL OVER IN FIFTY MINUTES

From an EXCHANGE TELEGRAPH CORRESPONDENT On Board a British Cruiser in the Mediterranean, Saturday.

WITH THE BIGGEST NAVAL ENGAGEMENT OF THE WAR BUT A FEW MINUTES AWAY, A BROAD-SHOULDERED SAILOR STOOD ON THE POM-POM DECK IN FRONT OF ME, WITH BOTH THUMBS STICKING UP AND A WIDE GRIN ON HIS FACE.

"The Italians are going to get it this time, if they don't run home to mother before we can get at them," he said.

His words typified the spirit of the whole force of British ships as we plunged along at full speed to engage what we knew to be a superior enemy force.

On the horizon were at least two battleships, one of the latest Littorio class and one of the Cavour class, seven cruisers, four 8-inch and three 7-inch, and about twelve destroyers.

SMOKE SCREEN
Our hopes ran high as the enemy appeared to be turning towards our battle line, consisting of the 8-inch gun cruiser Berwick and a large number of other cruisers and destroyers, the battle-cruiser Renown, the Flagship, and a battleship.

But twenty minutes after the action began the enemy threw out a smoke screen and fought the usual Italian rear action, while running at high speed for safety.

After a 50-minute pounding the enemy ships escaped northwards. Our ships were then within a few miles of the enemy coast and were forced to abandon the pursuit as the superior speed of the enemy ships had taken them out of range.

Our gunfire had taken heavy toll of the enemy. Aircraft from our cruisers and the Ark Royal reported that one Italian cruiser, believed to be an 8-inch, was on fire and burning furiously while a destroyer of the Grecale class had stopped, down by the stern and was listing heavily. Another destroyer had stopped and was listing slightly.

The enemy ships, having escaped from our guns, suffered a further battering in the afternoon from Swordfish bombers, who returned to report the scoring of a torpedo hit on a 35,000-ton battleship of the Littorio class, another on an 8-inch cruiser of the Bolzano class, and there were two bomb near misses on a 6-inch cruiser which is believed to have sustained damage. The only damage to our force was two shell hits on the Berwick.

70 MILES OFF

It was ten in the morning of the 27th when the news came that the Italian ships had been sighted steaming south-east, 20 miles off the coast south of Sardinia and 70 miles away from our position.

Just after noon the masts of the enemy ships came within vision of the naked eye, ahead and slightly to starboard. They were 15 miles away. Rapidly the distance narrowed. The enemy opened fire first. The shells fell well short of the cruisers in the centre of the line.

Then our own guns opened fire. Gun-flashes stabbed out from the Italian squadrons, which were now steaming on the port side on a parallel course to us. Shells plunged into the sea around the cruisers.

We were concentrating our fire on an enemy cruiser. An enemy destroyer began to lay a smoke screen, and we switched our fire to her as the smoke began to veil the enemy ships. When it was reported that the cruiser was on fire, we concentrated our salvos on another cruiser for the remainder of the action.

By this time the Italian fleet had nearly disappeared over the horizon, running for the shelter of the coast and shore batteries. Fifty minutes after we opened fire on the enemy the order to cease fire was given.

Johnnie Is The Star Turn

New York, Saturday.

CHILDREN evacuated from Britain were the main-quins at a new kind of dress show in New York.

The "models" were clothes made by American volunteers for children who are still "under fire" in Britain, and the audience in the club rooms of the English-speaking Union included many women who had paid a fee to see the clothes they helped to make.

The show was held to celebrate the conclusion of the volunteers' first full year of work, during which they had made 40,000 garments. The models shown were their latest completed shipment.

Fair, blue-eyed Johnnie Ainsworth, aged eighteen months, was the star of the afternoon. Johnnie, whose father was last heard of at Dunkirk, toddled forth, leading the parade, in what young America calls a snowsuit, but will change its name to "siren suit" by the time it reaches its destination.

American, Spanish, Russian, Norwegian and German girls, many of them also refugees, helped to show off the blouses, skirts, jumpers, caps, hats, sweaters and topsuits that represented the work of the volunteers.—B.U.P.

SHELTER INTRIGUE WITH GIRL, 16, ENDS UP IN JAIL

SPECIAL TO "THE PEOPLE"

A FORMER VOLUNTARY SHELTER MARSHAL, STATED BY A DETECTIVE TO HAVE CAUSED THE SEPARATION OF A HUSBAND AND WIFE BECAUSE OF HIS ASSOCIATION WITH THEIR 16-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER, WAS AT CROYDON YESTERDAY SENT TO PRISON FOR NINE MONTHS.

WITH HARD LABOUR ON CHARGES OF STEALING £14 ENTRUSTED TO HIM TO BUY STEEL HELMETS.

He was Harry Roland Clarke, thirty-eight, of Warwick-way, Victoria, S.W., who pleaded guilty, and also admitted obtaining £5 from a Y.M.C.A. secretary by means of a cheque which was dishonoured, and incurring a debt of £1 8s. by fraud.

Det.-Sgt. Batch said that Clarke was divorced. At one time he ran a dance band at Croydon. In August he acted as volunteer shelter marshal in Croydon, deputising at times for the district marshal.

He became friendly with a 16-year-old girl, who was doing volunteer work at the shelter marshal's headquarters, proposed marriage and bought her a wedding ring.

The girl's father objected to the association, and finally the girl and her mother left the district to stay with Clarke in London.

"Through this man's action, I am sorry to say, the mother and father of the girl, who had been happily married for thirty years, have parted, and there appears to be no hope of reconciliation," said Det.-Sgt. Batch.

Clarke, he added, borrowed £50 from the girl's mother, and persuaded the girl to cable her uncle in Australia for £50, to be collected by them at Australia House in London.

LETTER TO MOTHER
The uncle sent the money to the girl's home in Norbury, and Clarke and the girl called at Australia House, but were unlucky.

"When I called at Clarke's address he and the girl were living as man and wife," said the detective.

Sergeant Batch said that in a letter Clarke wrote to his mother he stated:

"I am married. Yes, I have done it again, but I have made no mistake this time. She's young, she is pretty, and she is well off. In fact, for the first time in his life your son has done himself a bit of good, especially financially."

A few days after he bought the wedding ring he pawned it. Sgt. Batch, that Clarke actually used a stick on her.

"I can best describe this man as a plausible and cunning rogue," said the detective.

Clarke asked for another chance, and said that he would repay the money whatever happened. He was in receipt of only 18s. a week public assistance. He was in debt and made things worse trying to get out of it.

In regard to the girl, they would have been married but for this case, he said.

THREE IMPORTANT DECISIONS BY THE MINISTER OF FOOD RE-LATING TO THE MILK SUPPLY COME INTO OPERATION TODAY.

Price will be increased by a halfpenny a pint; supply available will be 90 per cent. of quantity sold in first week of November; and deliveries will not take place before 7.30 a.m.

For several weeks the Food Minister, Lord Woolton, has warned the public that during December and January months there would be milk shortage, with little condensed milk available.

The Ministry have instructed dairymen to restrict by 10 per cent. customers' deliveries not in the "priority" classes.

Priority customers are hospitals; mothers and children receiving free, or cheap, milk under the National Milk Scheme; and children receiving daily supplies at schools.

Dairymen have been told to give special consideration to invalids in private houses.

Increase of a halfpenny will bring the price to 4½d. a pint throughout England and Wales, except in the case of urban districts or boroughs with populations of less than 10,000 and rural districts. There the price will be 4d.

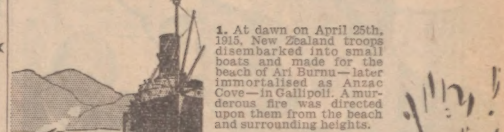

The higher price is not chargeable on the milk-in-schools scheme and the National Milk Scheme for mothers and children.

"THEIR FINEST HOUR"

41 C's for New Zealand —and more to come!

1. At dawn on April 25th, 1915, New Zealand troops disembarked into small boats and made for the beach of Gallipoli. A murderous fire was directed upon them from the beach and surrounding heights.

2. Side by side with the gallant Australians the New Zealanders advanced irresistibly. When their boats were shot from under them, they waded or swam. When a man fell, another took his place. In a few hours they had stormed the beach and cliffs.

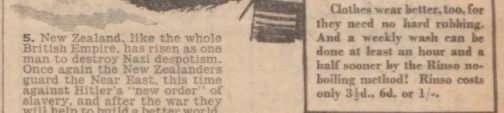

3. During 1914-1918, forty-one New Zealanders won the V.C. Today, they're out to win more of them. On December 13, 1939, the New Zealand cruiser Achilles, with H.M.S. Exeter and Ajax, challenged the Nazi pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee.

4. The German ship was bigger and more heavily armed. After a brilliant fight the Exeter was disabled, but by audacious seamanship and accurate gunnery the New Zealand cruiser and H.M.S. Ajax forced their battered foe to a neutral port.

5. New Zealand, like the whole British Empire, has risen as one man to destroy Nazi despotism. Once again the New Zealanders guard the Near East, this time against Hitler's "new order" of slavery, and after the war they will help to build a better world.

Huns' Desperate Throw To Smash Britain's BLOCKADE!

By Lieut.-Cmdr. E. KEBLE CHATTERTON
(The Famous Naval Historian)

FOR LONGER THAN A THOUSAND YEARS BRITISH AND NORWEGIAN SAILORS, WHETHER AS TRADERS OR FISHERMEN, HAVE LEARNED TO UNDERSTAND EACH OTHER AND TO ENTERTAIN A MUTUAL RESPECT; AND EVEN IN THE LAST WAR, WHEN OCCASIONALLY DELICATE INCIDENTS AROSE, BECAUSE OF DIFFICULTIES IN ENFORCING OUR BLOCKADE REGULATIONS, SCANDINAVIAN SKIPPER'S SHOWED THEMSELVES TRUE MEMBERS OF THE GREAT SEA BROTHERHOOD.

Especially was this noticeable when some Norwegian, Swedish or Danish vessel, was intercepted off north Scotland by one of those armed liners which the Admiralty had commissioned, and the British commanding officer might decide to send the stranger into port, where contraband experts might investigate the cargo more conveniently than in the open sea.

In order to make sure that there should be no evasion, an armed merchant cruiser of the Blockade Squadron would lower a boat and put aboard the Scandinavian an armed guard comprising a junior officer and a few men.

They brought with them their own victuals—enough for the day or two's voyage towards Lerwick or Kirkwall—and sometimes the riskiness of their undertaking began only a few hours after the cruiser had disappeared below the horizon.

mechanical propulsion she had been sold by British owners and now flew the Norwegian flag.

Did ever fellow nationals meet more strangely on the high seas? Luckily, too, she was homeward bound. So all hands were picked up, and the five Britons likewise found themselves in luck; for after awhile, the Springbank sighted the s.s. Caliban, to which Clarke's party were transferred. They thus reached Stornoway in safety.

Lucky? Perhaps even now, years afterwards, these men have not realised their narrow escape. U-36 was not far away, still doing her dirty work.

Heartless Tactics

One day in July, 1915, H.M.S. Motagua found it necessary to stop the Norwegian s.s. Fimreite, and as armed guard went Mr. P. B. Clarke with four men. Course was now altered for Kirkwall, and nothing untoward happened till north-west of the Hebrides an hour before sunrise on July 23, when U-36 was sighted off the port bow approaching along the surface at high speed.

This submarine was commanded by Kapitän-Leutnant E. Graeff, who had set out from Heligoland on the 19th, crossed the North Sea, then on the 22nd, being now west of the Orkneys, sank no fewer than nine trawlers and one steamer. Still pursuing his heartless tactics, Graeff at 4 a.m. next day fired a gun as signal to Fimreite that she would be next victim on the list.

"Lower a boat and come alongside."

The Norwegian master obeyed, but while he was being rowed across the waves, some serious thinking had to be done by Clarke, who happened to be only a Midshipman R.N.R.

What, in this difficult and sudden dilemma, should he do? He decided that his first duty would be to save the lives of his four men, in no circumstance let them be made German prisoners.

Taken By Surprise

At 6 a.m. on July 24 she sank a British trawler and a steamer. Twelve hours later, at 6 p.m. of this same 24th, Graeff was molesting the Danish s.s. Louise, when he sighted the somewhat unattractive 373 tons collier Prince Charles.

This steamer, being British, somehow seemed to the German just then the most luscious morsel impudently daring to hoist her Red Ensign.

So, forsaking Louise, U-36 began shelling the collier, which obeyed the bully, stopped engines, and awaited the next instruction.

Another shell passed so closely beneath the funnel and foremast that evidently the submarine was going to waste no time. And now only 600 yards separated smart U-boat from smoke-begrimed steamer.

Then, suddenly, the latter's roughly clad crew seemed to develop intense activity. Guns actually barked, shells came whizzing from her deck; the German gunners darter panic-stricken down the conning-tower, ugly holes were torn in U-36.

This was the first time a Q-ship surprised a German submarine. But since it became possible to save only 15 of the 33 German lives, and a prison camp was now to become the former's address, Britain's "secret weapon" remained unsuspected until another Q-ship in another locality was to repeat this initial success.

"What is the Navy doing?" Some people used to ask this quite unnecessary question during the last war. Had they but known at the time! Only three days after we sank U-36 H.M.S. Hildebrand, which also was one of the blockading squadron, spoke the Norwegian S.S. Trondhjemfjord.

Typically German

So, while the master was away, the young Midshipman ordered his quartette to remove their uniforms, disguise themselves as best they could, put revolvers in their pockets, and assist the Norwegian crew in lowering the other boats.

When, presently, the master's boat returned, it was to announce the following conversation which had taken place with Graeff.

"Where are you bound?" demanded the latter.

"For Hull," came the answer.

"Oh, Hull? Going there direct?"

"Well...not quite. Calling at Kirkwall."

"That obviously told its own story."

"I see. You go to Kirkwall. Then you have a Prize Crew on board, yes?"

"One British officer and four men."

"So? Then I shall sink your ship for trading with the British. Get your crew into the boats, but the Englishmen...ah, no! They shall go down in the Fimreite."

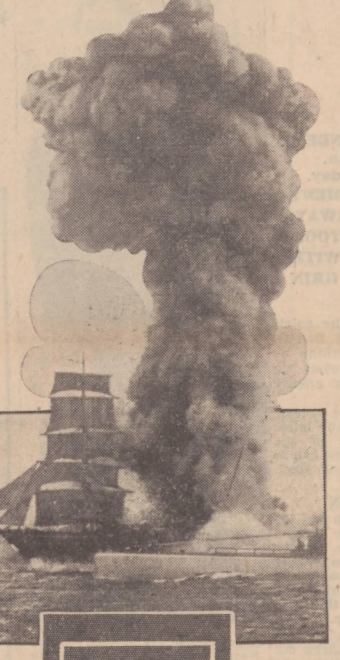

Clarke, however, had other ideas, and the five Britons, no longer wearing uniform, joined the Norwegians in the boats quite inconspicuously. They pulled away from their doomed steamer, U-36 fired fifteen shells, of which one penetrated to the boilers, and down disappeared the steamer bows first.

It was a cruel, typically German act, to leave those boats rolling about the lonely Atlantic with no expectation other than death by starvation and exposure.

A million-to-one chance against being sighted by some hurrying steamer. Every man realised that too well.

But that same afternoon at 3.30 a miracle of the sea happened. Coincidence, if you like to call it, and such as no fiction writer would dare to invent. Something was coming along over the water. Tall, conspicuous, but not a steamship. She turned out to be one of the survivors of the sailing-ship age and an historic example, too.

Stately and picturesque as ever under her cloud of canvas, leaning to the wind, here showed up that famous old barque the Springbank, once a famous ocean traveller known all over the world. But, with the advent of the usual drama opened when a U-boat appeared from nowhere and started shelling mercilessly.

Captain Bang altered course to bring the enemy astern, whacked up to full speed, and a great race ensued. But the Norwegian's efforts could prevail, at the end of half an hour the German had overhauled the escaper and resumed shelling, wherefore there was no other alternative but to stop.

Scarcely had Bang reached the submarine than the following questions were put to him: "Has any British patrol boarded your ship?"

"Not yet," lied the old skipper heroically.

"Then no armed guard is there?"

"No," insisted the master, fully conscious that his guests would otherwise be shot. He was glad to have saved their lives.

"I shall now sink your steamer," said the U-boat commander, "so it would be well for you to go back and abandon her immediately."

Eating The Cargo

But next day was followed by one of those ominous calms, with an ugly swell which made the schooner roll and wallow like a drunken thing, straining her rigging and jolting ropes and canvas, while spars creaked protesting and blocks whined mournfully; yet the tolling gear managed to get the wheel repaired, and course for Lerwick in the Shetlands was again attempted.

Alas! the fickle wind now changed to S.E., which meant right ahead, and dense banks of fog accentuated everybody's anxiety, since fog usually foretells a gale.

Sure enough on the 25th a northeaster, while dispersing the thickens, developed into another gale shortly after sunset.

Maters were looking not too good. Ten days of boxing about had practically exhausted the crew's provisions and those of the armed guard. Starvation would have been the next threat, but, fortunately, the Valand's cargo consisted of salted herrings, and on this fare all hands must subsist.

Optimism returned at 8 p.m. as Muckle Flugga was seen to the south-west, and weary men promised themselves a good long drink when once landed at Lerwick.

Again hope descended with a bump. Owing to the violent storm blowing on a lee shore, the absence of all lights along the Shetlands, the improbability of sighting any Lerwick patrols on such a wild night, Bamford with seamanlike prudence decided to stand right away from the land rather than risk piling up on the rocks.

Scarcely Credible

Thus, within an hour of this meeting, everyone took to the boats, the submarine approached to within 130 yards, a torpedo dashed forth and gashed a hole amidships. Over she listed to port then a large quantity of sulphuric acid in her cargo exploded violently sending debris high as the mastheads, and finally the Trondhjemfjord vanished beneath the water.

It was now that one more scarcely credible coincidence followed. Believe it or not, these shipless people were picked up by another Norwegian, and a barque she likewise happened to be.

Named the Glance, this vessel unfortunately was outward bound, but within a short time she sighted and signalled the s.s. Orlando flying the Swedish flag and on her way for Sweden. So to her were transferred Captain Bang and his people, while the armed guard were again transhipped—this time to the trawler Princess Juliana, which landed them, after many adventures, in Thorshavn.

So that summer passed, and with September began the long succession of gales which made the work of boarding no easier. It was the 16th of that month, and the scene that cold lonesome area north-west of Iceland, when H.M.S. Orcema, having intercepted the Swedish topsail

THE callous and murderous methods of the Nazis at sea differ little from those of the Kaiser's sailors during the last war. But then, as now, in their desperate efforts to break the stranglehold of our blockade, they were often frustrated by the ingenuity of the British Navy.

schooner Valand, decided the latter must go into Lerwick.

As armed guard she was given Mr. Cyril A. Bamford, Midshipman R.N.R., two seamen and a stoker. They guessed that life in such regions, at such a season, in a sailing ship would be no yachting cruise, but not one of the four suspected what an adventure they were beginning.

During the first three days, apart from discomfort, there was little of which to complain, though the fair wind fell so light as to render progress dead slow. During noon of the 18th the breeze came easterly, but not till 9.30 next morning did they sight the Faroes, that rugged group of twenty-one precipitous islands, which lie between Iceland and the Shetlands.

A shift of weather was indicated, the wind backed to the south-east, and by the 20th increased to a gale which compelled Valand to heave-to.

Worse and worse it blew, the seas rose so monstrously that Bamford decided to uphelm and run off to the northward.

So they sighted the Faroes for a second time.

One anxiety after another.

In the night of the 21st Valand's steering gear broke down, and it looked as if she would be driven across towards Greenland's icy mountains.

ACID STOMACH

Where's that sunny smile, that merry whistle, that schoolboy appetite, this morning? Why is he so glum and won't touch his breakfast? The answer is ACID STOMACH! Excess acid sours the stomach and upsets the system... naturally you feel out-of-sorts and the thought of food is nauseating. Take a little 'Milk of Magnesia' or two 'Milk of Magnesia' brand Tablets, and that sick, sour feeling disappears almost instantly. For 'Milk of Magnesia' promptly neutralizes the excess acid responsible for the upset. The stomach is soothed and strengthened, appetite returns and digestion proceeds in comfort. Flatulence, heartburn, nausea, indigestion and all stomach troubles due to excess acidity vanish in a marvellous manner on taking 'Milk of Magnesia'. It is the antacid most acceptable to the stomach and the one most extensively prescribed by doctors for patients of all ages. Keep it in readiness as a quick, safe and pleasant corrective for an acid stomach.

BANDIT WAR LORD OF ALBANIA

By STUART MARTIN

WHO was the first man to enter Koritza and force the Italians out of it, slaying them as they ran? I am told it was Vovvoda Vuk, the War Wolf. There is no surprise in that, for Vovvoda Vuk has been the terror of the Italians among the Albanian mountaineers for years.

It was in 1914 I met him first. A small pack horse laden with what remained of a home trudged into the little Serbian town of Kraguyevatz.

Leading the horse was a man. On the top of the pile of goods on the horse's back was his wife. Walking beside the man was a youth barely twenty years of age. That youth was Vovin Popovich. The three were refugees from the cruelties of the Germans.

Even as a child Vovin Popovich had seen crimes that would make men shudder. When he was still in his teens his father dedicated him to fight the enemy. The very children of the village played at "fighting the Germans." It was his playmates who first christened Vovin by the name of "War Wolf."

His father and mother were killed in the last war. Vovin swore a great oath. He joined the military college at Belgrade; but the army could not hold him.

He came back to what is called Albania, formed a band of men and took to the hills. He became a leader of comitadjis.

Comitadjis are mostly outlaws. Vovin and his men have lived in the mountains for years, refusing to accept Italian laws, opposing Italian troops wherever they could be met, performing deeds which ordinary mountaineers admitted were almost superhuman.

To the Italians Vovin and his band were just comitadjis. To the Albanians, and to the Greeks, they were patriots fighting for freedom.

When the Italians began the invasion of Greece the comitadjis rose as one man. The Greek Staff asked them whom they wanted as leader. With one voice they cried, "Give us Vovvoda Vuk! Give us the War Wolf!"

With the nominal rank of colonel, Vuk prepared for the fight. When other troops were forming at Salonika, the shadow of Mount Horiach, Vuk was already on the warpath, with his thousand men.

They climbed up the Pindus mountains, and there were almost surrounded. The order came for Vuk to retreat. It was feared there was a trap for the War Wolf. Some of his men came to him and said this was the end, and advised him to make a dash for it and fight till they were all slain.

"My children," said Vuk, "I will lead you through the Italian ranks."

—SWEPT—
THROUGH THE VALLEY

He did it. In the early morning when mist shrouded the peaks, he brought them into the valley, passing the Italian lines within half a mile, and crossed the frontier to the Morova Heights. The Greek staff gave him up for lost.

When he next reported his movements he was crossing the upper reaches of the River Devol, driving the Italian Alpini before him.

"How did you do it?" he was asked by his superiors.

"It was nothing," answered the Wolf. "My children and I know the mountains."

"You have saved our flank," said the staff.

The Wolf and his men marched on. They were used in desperate situations. They swept through the valleys around Mount Palaeomageron, they climbed the heights, left a trail of dead and disorganised enemy. They faced Mount Grammos.

There are three peaks here. The regulars had a feeble hold on one and needed reinforcements. Vuk called his men together. There were now about 700 of them.

"My comitadjis," he said, "we shall take the second peak tonight. Tomorrow we shall take the third. What do you say?"

"We'll take it, Vuk!" they answered.

On the second peak they found the Alpini, and scattered them. On the third peak they met the Bersaglieri—Mussolini's crack regiment—and cut them to pieces, taking stores, guns, equipment.

They chased both the Alpini and the Bersaglieri down the slopes, then came back for the much-needed stores, for they were far ahead of their own supplies. But another hundred of Vuk's braves lay still, never to march again.

—WANTON—
DAMAGE AND LOOTING

"Where shall we go now, Wolf?" asked the remaining six hundred.

"To Koritza," replied the Wolf, as he honed his sword afresh. "To Koritza. There will be real fighting now, brothers; and I have an appointment with Colonel Branchini."

The comitadjis laughed grimly at that. Colonel Branchini was the Italian leader who had put a price on the head of every comitadjis, and a thousand drachmas on that of the Wolf, dead or alive. They took Koryphtha, Kastoria (next the lake), then pushed on to Bilkishta, then to Ferni, then over to Changore, south of Mount Ivan. They stamped with rage and tears in every village as they saw the devastation left by the retreating Italians.

BEHIND the eviction of the Italians from Koritza lies the dramatic story of a vendetta which has burned with implacable hatred since the invasion of Albania during the last war.

AND here, by a man who knew him in his early days, is an intimate portrait of the great Balkan patriot, Vovin Popovich, who is today leading the Albanian revolt against the deluded minions of the puffed-up Mussolini.

If it does not fly, come down and meet me at the enemy headquarters.

"And if it still flies, Wolf?" "Come and avenge me, brothers."

He took with him his old servant, a rugged, lean comitadjis, and they disappeared in the gloom.

It was an hour before dawn when Vuk and his servant entered the suburbs, having passed over what had been the Italian line of defence outside the town. The old comitadjis carried his rifle and bayonet, and at his girdle hung his long knife. Vuk had his sword and revolver.

The streets were swarming with trucks and vehicles leaving the town. Vuk marched to G.H.Q., where several cars were drawn up, panting. Two sentries were at the door. Behind them were several officers, one of whom stepped forward as the Wolf brushed past the sentries.

"What do you want? Who are you?" he demanded.

"I come to offer my sword to Colonel Branchini. I shall tell him who I am."

"Here is Colonel Branchini coming."

Vuk saw, at the top of the stairs, a tall, pompous Bersagliere, heavy with decorations. With him were four others.

With a leap the Wolf was up the stairs, his comitadjis at his heels. They placed themselves so that their backs were to the wall and the Italians on the top step. The corridor was empty.

"Are you Colonel Branchini?" asked the Wolf quietly.

"I am Colonel Branchini. Who are you? What do you want?" "I am Vovvoda Vuk."

It seemed as if an unexpected

FLAMES
THAT LIT THE SKIES

It was a great temptation to the Wolf to fall on the Italians going towards Pogradet. That was the comitadjis' own country, wild and hilly. But Vuk bade his men postpone that.

"After Koritza, brothers," he said. "But first—Koritza—and Colonel Branchini."

All day on November 20 they watched the Greek shells battering the town. When darkness fell the flames of burning buildings lit up the sky. Vuk rose and addressed his men.

"I go to Koritza. At dawn look to see if the Italian flag still flies."

LIFE'S BIG PROBLEMS

SYMBOL OF THE BELLS
By the People's Friend

Do not regret the silent bells. Let their stilled tongues be a symbol of our grim determination to wage this war to its bitter end, to fight on until every country now tainted with the foul infection of Nazism is purged of that poison.

One day they will ring out again, wildly, clamorously, and the sound will go echoing round the world, glad tidings to all mankind. They will be ringing for victory, telling the nations that we have triumphed and that the day of terrorism and aggression has passed.

PERHAPS—who can tell—by this time next year the steeples will have broadcast that joyful message, and we shall be looking forward to celebrating a Christmas season that really will mean peace and good will among men.

If not, if the struggle still continues, we shall be as steadfast and resolute as ever, secure in the knowledge that victory will be ours in the end, and that it will be our efforts that will set the bells of peace and freedom ringing when that glad day comes.

Mountain Terror of the Italians thrill passed through the Italians. One of them drew his revolver, but the Wolf spoke softly.

"I have come to offer you my sword, Colonel Branchini."

The Wolf held his blade in his right hand. His revolver was in his left. Branchini misunderstood him, and made an attempt to be friendly.

"Your sword, Vuk? Hah, you can cover our retreat, you and your comitadjis—"

"You misinterpret my meaning," interrupted the Wolf sternly. "I offer you my sword, as we comitadjis say. Listen. On the walls of Koritza are bills offering a reward for my head. I saw them as I entered the town. You drove me to the hills and hunted me and my men. Shall I tell you what we have seen on our march to Koritza?"

He spoke rapidly, telling of the ruined villages, the outraged girls and women, the mutilated men, the looted houses, the burnings, ending with the terrible words: "When a comitadjis offers his sword he offers death."

The Italians fell back at his words, and one of the officers near Branchini made a movement. At the same moment Vuk's servant cried sharply, "Look out, my Wolf!" and lunged with his bayonet.

It was like the flash of a lizard's tongue. Out and in again. The officer who had drawn his revolver was down with a red trickle oozing from his chest.

They fought there at the top of the stairs, the two comitadjis and the other four Italians. The Wolf and his servant had their backs to the wall, the sword Vuk cut down, and sword against revolver and sword.

Branchini made an attempt to run, but he only got two steps down when the Wolf caught him, dragged him back, slammed him against the wall, and ran him through. The other three Italians were already down.

STANDING ON THE ITALIAN FLAG

Then Vuk and his man turned and ran up the next flight of stairs, along a corridor, then up a third flight and so to the flat roof.

With his sword Vuk cut down the Italian flag. Dawn had come. Down in the outskirts of the town Vuk saw his comitadjis running forward, bayonets gleaming. The Italians were fleeing before the avengers.

From the south of the town other Greek troops were coming, too, at the double.

Vuk came down the stairs with his old, rugged comitadjis.

When the commander of the Greek regulars arrived at the building, he found Vuk standing by the entrance surrounded by his men. He was standing on the Italian flag. The bodies of Italian officers and men lay on the steps, on the hall floor, on the staircase. Above them all lay Branchini, stiff and stark.

"My comitadjis and I give you Koritza," said the Wolf gravely, respectfully; and he began to hone his sword again.

HEALTH HINTS FOR SHELTER NIGHTS

—and the help that is ready if your home is hit

For your own and the country's good you should know (1) how best to live a healthy and comfortable shelter life, (2) the help you will get if you are bombed. Read the information given below, and the leaflets which you will shortly receive.

TO AVOID INFECTION

Illness spreads more quickly when people are crowded together. So make all members of the family gargle before they start for the shelter. Any of the usual gargles will do; a good home-made one is a teaspoonful of salt to half a pint of hot water. Make them gargle again when they get back from the shelter in the morning. Don't spit; it is a dirty habit, and dangerous to health. If you see anyone spitting in a public shelter, it is your duty to tell the warden at once. Coughing and sneezing will spread infection. Cover up your mouth whenever you cough or sneeze.

TO AVOID CHILLS

Keep your feet dry. One of the easiest ways of catching cold is by sitting with wet feet. If you have got your feet wet while on the way to the shelter, put on dry shoes and stockings (or socks) immediately you get there. If you need extra warmth, try a hot water bottle or a hot brick well wrapped up. (Heat the brick in the oven for 2 hours first.)

Bedding should be aired daily. It is even more important for the shelter than in your own home. The daily airing will keep the bedding sweet and fresh, and will help to get rid of dampness.

CHILDREN'S COMFORT

Before going to the shelter, dress children in nightwear UNDER their other clothing. Then, when bedtime comes, you can simply take off the outer garments. They will not sleep well if they are too warm.

AFTER THE RAID

Have your plans made. You should try to make plans now to go and stay with friends or relations, in case your house is destroyed. They should also arrange now to come to you if their house is knocked out. It's comforting to feel that everything is fixed up, just in case. Help is ready. If your home is damaged, there is a great deal of help ready for you. Full arrangements have been made to give you food and shelter, clothes and money if necessary and to find you somewhere to live. If you have not been able to make arrangements with friends, go straight to the Emergency Rest Centre. The wardens and police know where it is. Ask them.

BILLET DODGERS BUSY

They're Telling
U.S.A.

BRITISH child evacuees had two fixed ideas dispelled when they made their first tour of New York—that all American women are blondes and that all Americans have pale complexions.

But the children are not only learning from the Americans; they're telling them! For when the youngsters, very excited, saw the giant liner Queen Elizabeth, docked in the Hudson River, they boasted with great pride, to all within hearing of the superiority of British ship-builders.

The children were glad to see so much traffic in New York and to be able to watch aeroplanes without fear, but it has taken them some time to get accustomed to the changed conditions.—B.U.P.

STATE HAS COMPULSORY SCHEME

SPECIAL TO "THE PEOPLE"

REGIONAL INSPECTORS OF THE MINISTRY OF HEALTH—SOME OF THE GOVERNMENT'S MOST POWERFUL CIVIL SERVANTS—HAVE BEEN INSTRUCTED TO SURVEY DISTRICTS FOR WHICH THEY ARE RESPONSIBLE, AND TO REPORT TO WHITEHALL WHETHER THEY CONSIDER COMPULSORY BILLETING OUGHT TO BE INTRODUCED FOR EVACUEES FROM BOMBED TOWNS.

Reason for this move is that the voluntary billeting system in many of the country towns and villages has broken down.

Some places are already crowded to saturation point, while others are comparatively empty.

And in yet more districts small cottages have been packed out, while large mansions have been left untouched. Moreover, in many places it has become clear that billeting resistors have not been properly compiled, or, having once been compiled, have not been kept up to date.

Result is that when a train-load of evacuees has been sent to a certain town, it has been found impossible to accommodate them promptly, and they have either had to be put into schools, or sent on to some other district.

ARTFUL TENANTS Under the present system, too, billet dodgers have often been able to escape responsibility. By pretending their spare rooms were reserved for non-existent relatives, or they had invalids to look after, they often managed to keep their house to themselves, while other households had more refugees planted on them than they could accommodate.

Moreover, some municipalities themselves are hampering the billeting effort, by insisting on keeping in operation during war time red tape regulations framed in peace time, which prohibited tenants of municipal houses taking in lodgers.

Such a rule was never intended to prevent tenants rescuing bombed-out families from other towns, but some councils are insisting on a strict enforcement of the rule.

When the inspectors have made their reports to the Ministry, the Minister of Health will decide which regions are to have the compulsory billeting system applied to them.

It is probable that most of the regions will be dealt with in this way.

Women In Arms

OWN LABOUR BOSS WANTED

SPECIAL TO "THE PEOPLE"

WOMEN M.P.s ARE GOING TO MAKE MINISTERS' LIVES NOT WORTH LIVING UNLESS ONE OF THEIR NUMBER IS APPOINTED AS AN ASSISTANT TO MR. ERNEST BEVIN, IN THE CAPACITY OF MINISTER FOR WOMAN POWER.

They have sent deputations to Whitehall, and are now trying to see the Prime Minister himself.

They allege that the plan for mobilising the nation's woman power for national service is not going as well as it should, especially as there are more than 300,000 women out of work.

And they suggest that at the present time the Ministers are not paying enough attention to the work that women could do.

Unless a woman Minister is appointed, they say, this question of utilising women's ability will not be given the serious consideration it deserves.

The women M.P.s have in mind Miss Irene Ward, the Conservative M.P. for Wallasey, as the suggested candidate for the new Ministerial post.

She has spent the greater part of her life dealing with labour problems, and in her earlier years, before she entered politics, she held an important Civil Service appointment as a factory inspector.

Women M.P.s so far have not received much satisfaction in response to their demand. But they intend to keep hammering away, and do not intend to take "No" for an answer.

WEALTHY—WITH 15 WIVES

Cairo, Saturday.

It was disclosed by the police today that a wealthy chemist who was found murdered with his head battered in a house on the outskirts of Cairo had fifteen "wives."

His legitimate wife and children lived at Luxor, but when the news of his death appeared in the Press, no fewer than 14 other women, all said to possess regular marriage certificates, claimed to be his wives.

The victim, an Egyptian, spent about $25,000 in trying to turn base metals into gold.—Reuter.

SOVIET KNOWS HER NAZIS!

Moscow, Saturday.

"We live in a beleaguered fortress," said M. Kalinin, the Soviet President, in a recent speech to the Red Army Academy, which was published in Moscow today.

"It is a tremendous fortress covering a sixth of the world's surface," he said, "but the other five-sixths are held by our unprincipled, irreconcilable enemies."—B.U.P.

Britain's High Speed New Army Ready For "Der Tag"

BY OUR MILITARY CORRESPONDENT

BEHIND BRITAIN'S WELL-GUARDED FIRST LINE A GREAT ARMY IS STEADILY, SURELY AND UNREMITTINGLY PREPARING ITSELF FOR THE DAY WHEN IT WILL COME TO GRIPS WITH NAZI MILITARY MIGHT. IT WILL NOT BE INFERIOR IN TRAINING OR MATERIAL.

Its strength already is a revelation; it grows in power day by day.

We have felt the weakness that comes from lack of arms. Now the pendulum is slowly but inevitably swinging in the opposite direction. In the not very distant future it will be at its extreme.

Then the British Army will once again, as in the last war, be a huge fighting force, capable of attacking the Germans in their own particular military field.

New weapons are giving the British soldier a fire power which will exceed anything else in the world. Already in this war, in Belgium and France, he has proved his superior fighting spirit to that of the enemy. His day is surely coming.

The British Army today has motor and motor-cycle battalions in addition to its main armoured force. It has greater mobility than ever.

"THE DINGOES"

The Germans have yet to meet the scout cars or "dingoes," as the Army calls them. These little armoured vehicles are going to play an important part in obtaining information of the enemy's strength and dispositions in the days to come. They are the last word in armoured mobility.

The new motor battalions carry a heavy armament. They have a large number of Bren and anti-tank rifles in addition to mortars and grenades and small arms.

Thompson sub-machine guns, too, have arrived. Our men find them fascinating little weapons and they are undoubtedly anxious to prove their effectiveness.

Radio communication kept the C.O. in constant touch with his "feeler" platoons.

Here again the Army has made big strides and the modern infantryman can easily carry a radio set on his back which enables him to receive and send messages while on the move.

Finally, there is the rifle battalion increasing in power and mobility.

A high degree of organisation is required, for, in addition to the main striking force of infantry, there are anti-aircraft guns and mortars to be handled.

WAR SAVINGS STILL MOUNTING

LAST week a total of £16,106,479 in War Savings was raised, of which £6,654,779 was from Savings Certificates, £5,330,700 from Defence Bonds and £4,120,999 from increase in Post Office and Trustee savings banks deposits.

Since the opening of the campaign £186,409,850 has been raised from Savings Certificates and £182,220,075 by the sale of Defence Bonds.

The balances in the Post Office and Trustee savings banks increased by £110,360,000.

DESERT'S BIG-GAME HUNTERS IN KHAKI

FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

Nairobi, Saturday.

I HAVE JUST RETURNED FROM A VISIT TO A UNIT CONSISTING MAINLY OF MEN FROM THE TRANSVAAL, WHO ARE LIVING IN POSITIONS WHICH THEY HAVE PREPARED FOR THEMSELVES IN A DUSTY DESERT, SCREENED FROM THE EYES OF ANY RECONNOITRING ENEMY AIRCRAFT BY A TANGLE OF GREY THORN BUSH, WHICH OVERLIES ALL OF THIS UNTAMED REGION.

They have dug trenches and prepared defences under a sun which beats down relentlessly from a brassy sky. The daily average temperature is about 115 deg. in the shade.

When I visited this regiment, the men had just returned from a 300-mile patrol, during which they had not seen as much as a single footprint.

VICIOUS BEASTS

On the way back to their temporary headquarters in the bush they had collected forty-four baby crocodiles—vicious, snapping creatures about twice the size of the average South African lizard, which they fed on bully beef and bilong (dried meat).

When the General lunched on grilled sandgrouse, he learned that the men of this unit had become experts in hunting the birds with knobkerries (a short stick with a heavy knob at the end).

Two of the men had found waterholes frequented by sandgrouse and knocked down twenty-four in one night, and so for several nights running the troops had been able to vary their bully beef with bird.

One section of riflemen, returning to camp along a bush path, found themselves faced by an infuriated hippopotamus which had been wounded by native hunters. It had two spears quivering in its side. The hippo, charged, but one of the riflemen, an experienced game hunter, dropped it with a single shot from his Service rifle.

During the night there was a sudden commotion. One of the men felt a weight on his chest and yelled for a light. The rays of a torch showed a python, 9 ft. long, crawling over him. The men snatched their bayonets from their scabbards and hacked the reptile to pieces.

The skin of the python and the hide of the hippo are now curing in the camp and may become souvenirs.—Reuter.

Keep Fit for Service this War-time Winter

EVERYONE expects that this will be an unusually trying winter. The strain of wartime conditions, added to the stress of wintry weather, will impose a considerable test on our powers of resistance against winter ills.

Yet never was it so important to keep fit and on top of your work—in the office, in the factory or in whatever sphere of service you play your part.

You can go a long way to maintain this winter-time fitness if you remember that the two vital essentials to health are restorative nourishment and restful sleep. The best way to ensure these is to make "Ovaltine" your regular daytime and bedtime beverage.

Experience proves that delicious "Ovaltine" is pre-eminently the restorative food beverage. Its exceptional advantages in this respect are largely due to the eggs used in its manufacture. Obviously no food beverage can be fully restorative unless this property is derived from its ingredients.

Now that certain foods are rationed the daily use of "Ovaltine" is of particular importance. It makes your diet complete in the food elements you need to repair the daily stress and strain on your system, and to build up the strongest resistance to winter ailments.

A cup of "Ovaltine" taken at bedtime is the surest way to enjoy revitalising sleep of the best kind. Even when sleep is broken, "Ovaltine" will prove your best stand-by in helping you to resume sleep quickly and derive the utmost benefit from it.

For all these reasons you should depend on "Ovaltine" to keep you fit for service every day during this wartime winter.

"The People's" Secret Service News

REPORTS reaching London tend to show that the Italian rout threatens to nullify much of Hitler's personal diplomacy of the last two months. Chief point he had made emphasised that Italian supremacy in the Mediterranean was unchallenged.

Despite rigid censorship news of Fascist defeat has spread blank dismay throughout Italy and Germany. Only Italian strong man who might have been able to smother the unrest—Fascist Secretary General Mussolini—has been shot down in Greece and is a prisoner.

TURKISH preparations against any possible Nazi drive are now complete. The Chatalya offensive-defensive system in Anatolia on the Bulgarian frontier which guards the Dardanelles and Salonika was described by a visiting German military commission, which included Von Kettel and Von Brauschisch, as a tougher proposition than the purely defensive Maginot Line.

Behind Nazi delay in trying to save Mussolini is a new doubt about latest Russian moves. In spite of the Molotov visit to Berlin, Stalin has made no effort to facilitate supplies—especially oil—to Germany.

On the other hand, Moscow has made no secret of the fact that all offers by Turkey for Caucasian oil have been met in full. One purchase of lubricating oil includes a shipload—8,000 tons—which had been turned back from the Rumanian port of Constanza just as it had arrived on German account.

Submarine building in Germany which Goering boasted would reach 400 vessels a year, has been reduced to a fractional proportion by specialised R.A.F. raids on the few shipyards which can build them.

Though our losses are heavy, the latest intensified U-boat campaign is not proving nearly the success Hitler had banked on. Most of the Italian submarine fleet had been handed over to Germany, but Nazi commanders are finding the Italian crews—like those in their surface vessels—better stokers than fighters.

Italian airmen, too, who had been sent to join the airkrig over Britain, have to be specially guarded both in the air and on land, not only from their Nazi colleagues who despise them, but from soldiers and civilians alike, who assault them whenever they show themselves.

Most significant fact about Italian air-crews, however, is their make-up before a flight. All must be strangers to each other in case of pre-agreement to make a "forced" landing and surrender in Britain rather than face a Spitfire or Hurricane. This system is also in force in Albania and Libya.

GRAZIANI's difficulties are increasing in inverse ratio to the continued strengthening of the British position in Egypt. The shadow of possible trouble in his rear from Tunis is gradually taking shape now that the colony is united in its determination never to be dominated by Italy.

Official Free French communiqué revealing how Hitler double-crossed Mussolini by trying to do a deal with France at the expense of rewards guaranteed to Italy (exclusively revealed in "The People" some weeks ago) has had a double reaction—exposed the rift in the Axis and stiffened French resistance against both dictators, who Greece has shown, no longer can rely on putting over their "inflexible unity" bluff.

It can be definitely stated that the French Fleet will not fall into Hitler's hands, nor will it ever be stationed where a Nazi coup to seize it will have any prospect of success.

There is not a woman anywhere, married or single, rich or poor, over the age of forty who is not perturbed at the thought of the middle years before her. She fears them all the more for their uncertainty. That Splash of Scarlet

By Mrs. Everywoman

THAT little bit of extra colour, what a difference it makes! Berries on the holly, a brilliant feather, even pink rice pudding all help to keep us gay in these grim, short days of winter.

Walking down Bond-st. yesterday I saw in a window a hat made entirely of scarlet geranium florets. What a lively hat for a bride to wear, I thought. Just the thing to cheer up a navy or dark tweed overcoat!

We're all gone so practical these days, but we can be bright as well. For instance, instead of the white collar to a dark dress why not knit a little scarf in scarlet or emerald two-ply wool, and knot it closely to the throat with the end tucked into the front of the dress.

Another idea. You know those long ropes of coloured beads—amber, jade and lapis—we used to wear. Why not have them re-threaded to a double rope or three-strand choker. They look ever so smart with a wool dress. Your colours can be bizarrely mixed. Amber for a purple dress, jade on cerise or plum, scarlet on blue.

Look through your beads and ribbons and see what there is that can be twisted into a spot of Christmas cheer. With a drab mackintosh or tweed coat on a foggy day it is surprising how cheerful it is to see a pair of orange or red ankle socks twinkling along the pavements.

These ankle socks are quickly knitted and my, how warm and cosy they are to the feet, especially if you travel far by bus or train. Bright ones are just as warm and practical as the greys and fawns.

Grown-ups love colour just as much, and it is only that we have got out of the habit of wearing it.

Next week I want to have a look round for Christmas presents. I've already seen plenty of crackers, so we can at least have one family bang up!

Just a Pinch of...

By "HOUSEWIFE"

MOST gardens in this country produce a season's crop of sweet and savoury herbs. Now is the time to make good use of them. Parsley, thyme, mint, sage and marjoram, that can all be used to zip up a dull dish.

Have you tried a pinch of sage, parsley and mint to flavour a shepherd's pie or Irish stew instead of onion? And there are all sorts of herb-flavoured stuffings and dumplings which will eke out the meat ration. Many of you have found other good herb mixtures for your sweet and savoury dishes.

Write your favourite herb-flavoured recipe on a postcard and send it to "Housewife," "The People," Acre House, Long Acre, London, W.C.2, to arrive not later than December 4. Five shillings will be paid for recipes published.

HOUSEHOLD A B C

By "Mrs. X"

Prizes will be awarded for the best hints beginning with the letter H, on postcards (not enclosed in envelopes) addressed to "Mrs. X," c/o "The People," 7, Long Acre, London, W.C.2, and should reach this office not later than Wednesday, December 4.

DULL dark days and nights can be made less dreary. We are not careful to counteract the effects.

EARLY-MORNING wash in cold water is refreshing. A light dusting with a clean puff is better than a rub with a clove oil.

CRISPY powder-puffs, not only waste powder—it clings to the greasy puff surface instead of to the face—but are harmful to the complexion. They are a source of irritation to sensitive skins.

HAIRBRUSHES, powder-puffs, face-flannels and sponges need extra care now. Give them a good weekly wash. When you have a good supply of hot water at bath time, take the opportunity of cleansing these toilet accessories.

JARS of cold cream, vaseline and an antiseptic cream are well worth having. Cold cream is great for cleaning the complexion night and morning; vaseline is healing; and for the sprouting and itching as well as chills, an antiseptic cream helps.

KEEP your hair well brushed and trimmed. Even if you cannot have your customary shampoo regularly, a neat trim and brush will keep your hair healthy.

LEAVING make-up on overnight is a bad habit. It is a muddy complexion. Whether you go to the shelter or remain at home, and whether you can have a wash or not, always remove powder and cream before settling down for the night.

MOST effective way of removing make-up. Use cold cream with cleansing tissue, then wash in warm water, and finally close the pores with a douche of cold water.

NEVER mind if you cannot have this hair wash. Use cold cream, remove with a cleansing tissue, then add a few drops of eau-de-Cologne, which-chisel to a soft face—oil or tissue and cleanse the face thoroughly with this.

OILY hair needs more care than the drier variety. If you cannot wash this type of hair frequently, give it a once-a-week friction rub with a coarse towel and a few drops of eau-de-Cologne.

PAY special attention to your nails—these days—finger and toenails. Keep them filed short and see that your nailbrush is in good condition.

QUITE a lot of germs can collect round neglected finger nails. So use a good cleansing soap and look after your hands. Round the cuticle. They may become septic.

REMEMBER never to cut the cuticles. Softer them with vaseline or cream and keep them in place by gently massaging them back from the nails.

Five shillings has been awarded for the best hints beginning with V. W. X.

VEKED because your salt-cellsars will clog and clog in this damp weather? Then add a pinch of arrowroot every time you fill them and you will find that the salt keeps dry and pours freely.—Mrs. V. J. E. Page, 178, Aragon-rd., Morden, Surrey.

WHEN making a steak pudding or pie, if unable to obtain the usual kidney, try a small amount of liver instead cut up in the usual way. The flavour and gravy are even more tasty than with kidney. (Should this be worthy of a prize, kindly forward it to the Red Cross.)—Mrs. G. W. Ludlow, Cassa Primera, Wallace, Chatham.

YOUR old wax paper, bread wrappers, etc. made into spills, make excellent substitutes for tapers, as they give a good light and burn very steadily.—Mrs. E. Whitehurst, 51 Ripon-st., Ashton-under-Lyne, Manxester.

Heroes Of Bombed A.R.P. Post WOUNDED WARDENS

CRAWL 450 YARDS TO GIVE ALARM

THREE A.R.P. WARDENS WHO, THOUGH SERIOUSLY INJURED WHEN A BOMB DAMAGED THEIR POST, CRAWLED A QUARTER OF A MILE TO GIVE THE ALARM WERE THE HEROES OF A RAID ON A TOWN IN THE THAMES ESTUARY AREA.

Two ambulance men on duty at the post were killed.

The wardens—R. Tomlin, H. W. Sims and C. F. Ponting—were badly hurt, but their sole thought was for the plight of others.

Linking arms, they crawled nearly 450 yards up the road to notify the control centre.

They were in such a weakened state when at last they reached the building that they could only just gasp, "Report, report," and indicate where the damage had occurred.

Then they collapsed and had to be taken to hospital.

His Birthday

WINSTON, 66, KEPT AT WORK

MR. WINSTON CHURCHILL CELEBRATED HIS SIXTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY YESTERDAY—BY "GETTING ON WITH THE WAR."

There was no special family party, but congratulatory messages from all parts of the country of the Empire reached 10, Downing-st.

The Netherlands East Indies cabled $25,000 as a birthday present—for seven Spitfires—and from Singapore came news that Malaya has collected £11,500—enough to present Mr. Churchill with two Spitfires for his birthday.

And the Prime Minister carried on with his customary carefully planned day, which begins while the black-out is still on, and continues often until the early hours of the following morning.

Oh, the Gravy!

ALL the rich juices of the roast, plus OXO's concentrated goodness gives you the perfect gravy. No vegetables are left over when there's plenty of rich gravy.

KITCHEN HINT.

THICK VEGETABLE SOUP.
Fry a piece of finely chopped leek in dripping. Stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour and cook five minutes. Add pint of vegetable liquid, half pint water and two Oxo cubes. Stir until Oxo is dissolved and the soup thickens. Add a large cupful of diced cooked vegetables (carrots, turnips, potatoes, celery) etc.

M.P.'s Plea

'SEND HALIFAX to MOSCOW'

By Our Diplomatic Correspondent

THE Prime Minister is to be asked to send Lord Halifax, Foreign Secretary, to Moscow, to confer on the spot with our Ambassador, Sir Stafford Cripps, on the possibility of improving Anglo-Russian relations.

The proposal is being made by Mr. R. R. Stokes, M.P. for Ipswich.

There is a feeling in diplomatic circles that the moment has arrived when a serious bid should be made—and could perhaps profitably be made—to put our relationships with the Soviet on a more secure footing.

Yes, they're Christmas puddings—made by the Wrens—and all ready for boiling.

U.S. Can Aid Blockade GERMAN OIL IS DWINDLING!

IN A PERIOD OF MONTHS—AND NOT YEARS—THE ENEMY'S OIL POSITION WILL BE ONE OF GREAT AND GROWING SCARCITY. MR. HUGH DALTON, MINISTER OF ECONOMIC WARFARE, GAVE THIS ASSURANCE IN A BROADCAST TO AMERICA EARLY THIS MORNING.

SAVING IS DUTY OF ALL

INAUGURATING War Weapons Week at Morecambe yesterday, Mr. Walter Elliot, M.P., said air attacks on Britain made saving not only a patriotic duty, but a common-sense act.

To buy goods beyond the absolute minimum required was simply to scoop together a pile of property which could be blown to bits on any starry night.

To save and to invest meant that the property of each citizen shared the security of all.

The citizen's pound which brought this security would find itself in the end sheltered with 1,100,000,000 other pounds saved in the course of the last year alone.

ROME SNUB TO U.S.

Rome, Saturday. To disprove British claims of damage inflicted on Italian warships, foreign correspondents of neutral countries have been invited by the Press Ministry in Rome to take part in a trip to an unspecified naval base on Sunday.

Correspondents of United States newspapers have been excluded, however, owing to the unfriendly attitude of the American Press and the fact that naval secrets might be seen by them.—B.U.P.

Hitler's Next

"Expect Peace Drive"

GERMANY—robbed of her hoped-for short war, cheated of easy victory in the Mediterranean, let down by her junior partner, Italy, in Greece and Africa, and feeling the pinch inside her own lands as our blockade continues its inexorable pressure—may well put out peace feelers.

"They can be made only through the Vatican or the White House," states Lord Queenborough in his monthly message to the Royal Society of St. George.

"If and when such feelers are put out, the power of the White House will be enormous," he says.

"It is well for democracy—not merely for Britain—that in the White House there still sits a man, able from experience to weigh the sincerity and the significance of Nazidom, and yet able equally to assess the capacity of the world for further war.

SOCIAL CHANGES

"President Roosevelt will obviously not tolerate, in any peace terms in which he has a voice, abuses in other countries that he has set himself to eradicate in his own.

"We in England should clear our minds of out-worn phrases, cease to talk of 'swings to the left' or 'swings to the right,' and begin to envisage without nervousness sweeping changes of social and economic relationships which the war will make inevitable.

"If those changes are based on a proper comprehension of social justice, and are in the line of our old constitutional traditions, they will be but the natural evolution of a nation.

BEGINNING OF END

"Held in Africa, rolled back from Greece, defeated decisively in the Mediterranean, Mussolini is proving as hapless an ally to Germany as his nation was to Britain in 1917," Lord Queenborough continued.

"The defeat of the Axis combination on its Italian flank may well be the beginning of the end, though the end may yet be far from us.

"It may be late Spring before Britain begins to show superiority, and before that time there will be much to endure.

"All that remains now is to endure a little longer until the day when the British forces, re-equipped, fully trained, and filled with an unquenchable determination to avenge the wrongs of Europe, shall carry the war again into the enemy countries."

"AID BRITAIN AND FREEDOM"—WILKIE

New York, Saturday. "WE must continue to help Britain's fighting men in order to preserve that rim of freedom that is gradually shrinking and will eventually shrink to our own shores," declared Mr. Wendell Wilkie, Republican candidate for the U.S. presidency, in a broadcast last night.

"I do not believe a man should be called a warmonger and a Fifth Columnist because he advocates aid for Britain," added Mr. Wilkie.

CECIL HADLEY CALLING

HERE THERE AND ANYWHERE

92, Long Acre, London, W.C.

THE great thing about this column has always been the deeply subtle wit of its jokes and wisecracks. It often happens that readers don't see them at all, they are so subtle.

ONE of the writers says: "It is recorded, as our readers may remember, that as a child Achilles was dipped in the waters of the Styx."

Of course they remember, my dear sir. Once you hear a thing like that it sticks. . . sticks. . . Come, come, sir, it isn't as subtle as all that. . . sticks. . . ah! You've got it! Splendid.

HAVE you noticed since all the leader writers and columnists are tossing off bits of Greek and things they learned at Borstal and places. They are showing almost sickening familiarity with guys like Themistocles, Pericles, Bicycles and Cicero, and kidding their customers with that bit about "as our readers may remember" when they know that their readers, like myself, worked in the mill at the age of ten.

BY the way, so that you shan't give yourselves away in company, let me warn you not to say "kools" at the end of those words. For instance, "Perry-kools" would be a positive faux pas for you. It is "clees" you have to say—Perry-clees. Same with all the others.

THESE foreign names are never what they look. It is all done to trap you. Her-cules is another example. Fancy calling a fellow Herc-les. But then just as you think you have got the idea, they trip you up over a simple looking one like Perseus, which isn't Per-see-us at all, but Per-sthuse.

THEN, of course, there are the ones starting with an X. You know, that "musical"

SMOKERS' FUR

IS IT RUINING YOUR TEETH?

Try this now. Run your tongue round your mouth, do you notice it has a rough woolly feeling. Smokers' fur has got a hold, and is damaging and staining your teeth. But don't worry, you can stop this fur from ruining your teeth today. Dentists know smokers' fur is caused by excess acid in the mouth. The acid and you shift the fur. What is the scientific way to destroy smokers' fur? 12,000 dentists use "Milk of Magnesia" brand antacid as the most effective antacid known. 12,000 dentists urge smokers to use "Milk of Magnesia" brand antacid. "Milk of Magnesia" is the only toothpaste containing—Phillips' Dental Magnesia.
